IT Returns

Bill Denbrough, or as he goes by now, Troy Abrams was on his way to his sons school. His son was in a club called Glee Club, the group is about singing. He pulled in the parking lot with a sigh, stopping the car and taking the keys out of the ignition.

Memories of his school years, and Georgie flashed through his head. He shook those thoughts out of his head as he exited his car and went inside the school. When he got to the Glee room he saw a few other adults in there.

He walked in, "Hey, dad." His son rolled over to him, "Hey Son," he smiled. "Okay, guys. Quiet down and head to your seats so we can begin." Will said, after the adults and their children had a few moments to talk.

The adults went to the side, "So. Let's have the adults introduce themselves starting with...you." Will pointed to Bill, he nodded and went to the center of the room. "Hello, I'm Troy Abrams and Artie's father." He greeted, the door then opened and shut. Making everyone jump, no one was at the door though.

"What was that?" Blaine's mother asked, Bill glanced at Blaine's mother. She seemed familiar. "That's not your name," a voice whispered. Everyone was confused. Well everyone except Bill.

"Who was that?" Rachel asked, looking around. "It sounds, familiar..." Quinn's father noticed, "too familiar..." Blaine's mother agreed. The two looked at each other. There was a projector in the room, it turned on. Everyone looked at it.

"This is way to familiar," Santana's father said. Names appeared on the screen, Stanley Uris, Bill Denbrough, Ben Hanscom, Beverly Marsh, Richie Tozier, Mike Hanlon, and Eddie Kaspbrak.

The seven adults in the room froze. "Dad?" Rachel asked Stanley, he looked at her. "We all float down here," someone said from the hallway as a red balloon flew into the room.

"What's that?" Sam asked, "The adults have to say their real names," Finn said. Referring to the parents. "I'm-" Beverly was cut off by a voice in the hallway. "Beverly~" It sang, "Are you still my little girl?"

Beverly froze, "Mom?" Blaine asked confused as to why his mother froze. "Beverly?!" Quinn's father and Artie's father exclaimed, "Ben? Bill?" She asked, both boys nodded.

"Holy shit, how did we all end up in the same place?!" Eddie exclaimed, "you guys all know each other?" Will asked, "unfortunately." Sam's father sighed.
